

Join us in Shaping the Future of Co-Production in Evidence Synthesis!

A.

Who we are

The Cochrane Co-Production Methods Group is made up of patients, researchers, and other interest holders who are dedicated to supporting the co-production of evidence syntheses on health and care topics. Scan to learn more about our members and mission.

i

We understand co-production in evidence synthesis to mean people (such as, though not restricted to, patients, carers, health professionals, policy-makers, researchers) working together in 'a partnership' to produce and/or disseminate evidence syntheses.

B.

Main objectives

- Spearhead research to establish best practices in co-production of evidence synthesis
- Promote co-production within Cochrane reviews and other evidence syntheses.

C.

Our first steps

The group formed two subgroups, a communication group, and a research group. The research group developed a study protocol to collect and prioritise most pressing research needs. Read the protocol here

D.

YOUR part

The aim of our study is to systematically identify, rank, and reach high agreement on the most important research topics in the field of co-production in evidence synthesis, and to identify which topics are still unaddressed, to ensure that future research efforts on co-production in evidence synthesis are directed towards areas of greatest need and potential impact.

We need YOUR input

- to IDENTIFY pressing research topics
- to PRIORITISE these topics
